He watched fascinated as day after day the warrior laboured at a seemingly impossible task. The young man began to develop respect for his enemy's determination. Eventually he found himself helping the man digging side by side with him and carrying out the stone.

Years passed and then one day the two men broke through to the other side.

The mountain was conquered at last and the centuries-old isolation of the village ended.

"Now, I am ready to die," said the warrior, kneeling before the young man. "Cleave my head in two." The youth raised his sword so that his father's death could be avenged. But he could not bring himself to do it. Slowly he lowered his sword.

"You're a murderer," he said. "But I've learnt much from you in these last few years. How can I kill my teacher?"

And he put his sword back and walked away.
